

Developing Self-Directed Learning

What is Self-Directed Learning?

What is Self-Directed Learning?

Some common misconceptions:

- SDL is learning by yourself
- SDL is an easy way-out for teachers
- SDL is non-collaborative
- e-learning is SDL

What is Self-Directed Learning?

Self-Directed Learning is about diagnosing your learning needs, (where am I now?) identifying your learning goals (where am I going?), implementing learning strategies (how do I get there? & am I there yet?) and evaluating learning outcomes (how well did you learnt).

Where am I now?
Where am I going to?

How do I get there?

Am I there yet?

How well did I learn?

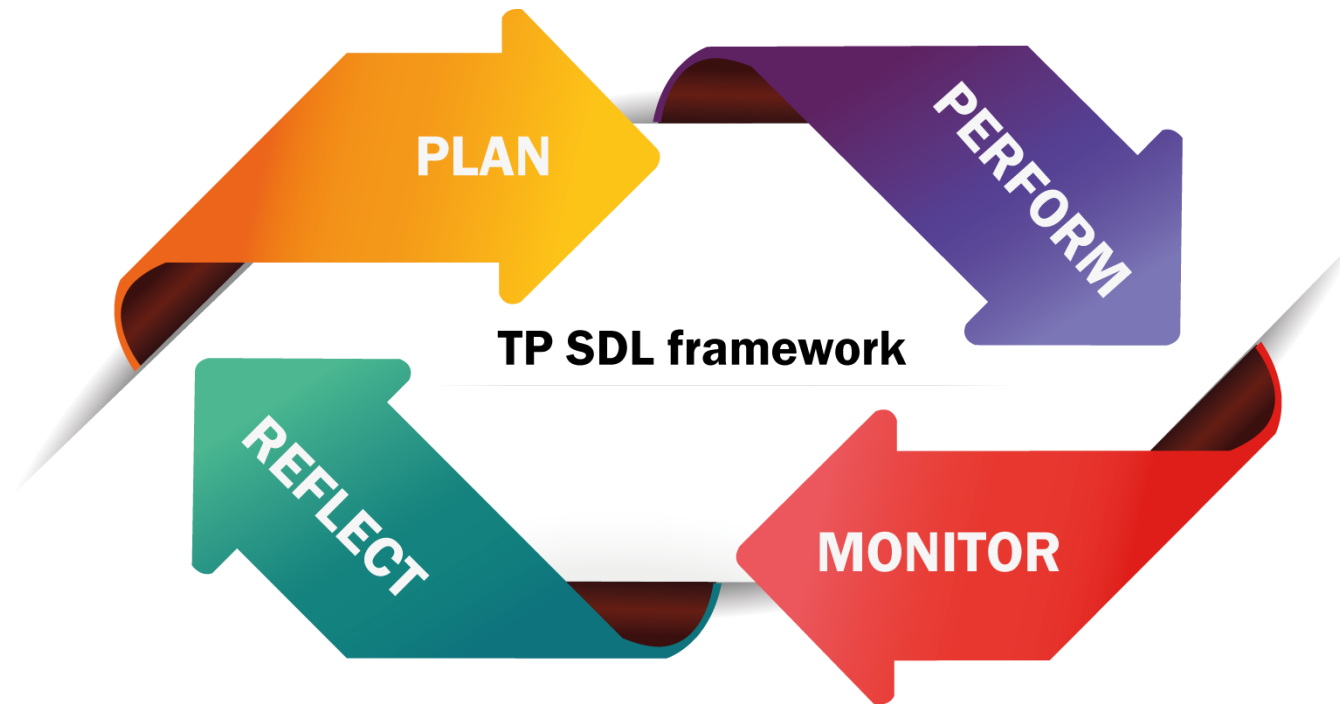

Self-Directed Learning

- Like any other study skill, you can learn to acquire Self-Directed Learning skills. There is a 4-step learning process to help you develop Self-Directed Learning skills.
